When the Lyon brothers took over the stagecoach stop in the 1870s, roughly where Eternal Valley Cemetery is today (we don't know the exact location of the station, either), the area was known Ealyon. It would be another couple of years before Henry Mayo Newhall came along.

The first official Newhall schoolhouse was built in 1879 near the intersection of Walnut and 9th St., two blocks back from Newhall's "Main Street" (Railroad Avenue). The school housed first through eighth graders and saw an average daily attendance of just seven children. No more than 13 ever attended on a single day, even though 53 school-age children were living in the vicinity when the school was erected.

Pictured in the middle of this (c. 1883) photograph is the teacher and principal, John Ellsworth Wright. According to Wright's great grandson Sven E. Svenson of Oregon, Wright was principal of Miramonte School in the San Francisco Bay Area from 1908-1936. Wright had (at least) two daughters; Ethel Wright (Svensen's grandmother) was born in Newhall in 1897. This school building burned to the ground in 1890 and was rebuilt nearby.

The gentleman on the right (white shirt and vest) is Frank Landel, on his right stands George Campton, Newhall's first postmaster. Landell kept up the postoffice books for Campton, and later, when a partner with Nick Lindenfelt, was postmaster in his own right. At Landell's left elbow, may be seen the cubby hole effect of the postoffice window. The one important store feature not shown in this photo is the whiskey barrel. It was in the back room. It so happens that today you only locate these sites by the ledges in place. The shacks are gone, The derricks have largely succumbed to time and weathering. Nothing remains of the bridge. The creek bed, under it, went on a rampage and changed positions decades back. The derrick in the middle of the picture probably was on the Star well. At the century's turn, this was a most active section. The picture was possibly taken in the last half of the 1880s. Mr. Howard Goldberg thinks the lower derrick may have been Well #32. The location was then marked by the bridge by the bluff. The bridge went many years ago and the bluff was cut for today's road. Newhall train depot, angled off to right. Man in front of stairs
The Newhall train depot was initially erected in the summer of 1876 near the modern-day intersection of San Fernando Road and Magic Mountain Parkway, along the San Joaquin Valley line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, which linked Los Angeles with San Francisco for the first time.
In January, 1878, the depot and the rest of the little town of Newhall were moved two miles south, probably to be closer to indigenous water sources. The depot was rebuilt at what would become the northeast corner of Railroad Avenue and Market Street, still along the same rail line. A similar looking warehouse was built at the southeast corner of the same intersection. Both structures eventually burned down, although not at the same time.
This photograph was taken in 1909 as a picture postcard

The Southern Pacific Depot in Newhall stood on the spot where today's Metrolink Station is now. After passenger service ended, the old depot went downhill. It was used as a vegetable packing plant, finally burning to the ground in 1961.

1878." "This is the only photo of the Newhall Southern Pacific Depot known to be in existence when the station was relatively new. Taken about 1881, it shows two flat cars with ancient link and pin couplers, on the siding with donkey boilers consigned to the Pico oilfields. The station looked swell in those days; the windows were trimmed in light shades and trees visible in the foreground. If you look closely at the doorway, you can see a young lady dressed in the fashion of the day, waiting for her train to arrive." Caption from Newhall Signal, Thursday, January 17, 1963.
The Newhall Train Depot was initially erected in the summer of 1876 near the modern-day intersection of San Fernando Road and Magic Mountain Parkway, along the San Joaquin Valley line of the Southern Pacific Railroad, which linked Los Angeles with San Francisco for the first time.
In January, 1878, the depot and the rest of the little town of Newhall were moved two miles south, probably to be closer to indigenous water sources. The depot was rebuilt at what would become the northeast corner of Railroad Avenue and Market Street, still along the same rail line. A similar looking warehouse was built at the southeast corner of the same intersection. Both structures eventually burned down, although not at the same time. This photograph was probably taken in the 1890's.

"Originally Hardison Stewart warehouse Main St. -- bought by Aleck Duncan -- then by Mrs. Frances Phillips who moved it to Spruce St., was north of Standard Oil warehouse."
"Hardison Stewart warehouse c1883, 24634 San Fernando Road -- was moved from Main St. (Railroad Ave.) by Mrs. (Delano) Phillips.
"For a few Democratic years, probably President Cleveland's administration, George Campton's store lost the post office when the postmaster's job went to George Larkey. Larkey was then living in the Hardison and Stewart headquarters (pictured) on Main Street (Railroad Avenue at Eight St.), built in the early 1880's as an office-warehouse with a loading platform backed up against the tracks. After Hardison and Stewart pulled out for Santa Paula (and the founding of the Union Oil Company, it was a residence and post office). Later, a second story was added and it was known as the Ashbridge Hotel. When the highway moved over to San Fernando Road, Mrs. Frances Phillips purchased the building and did likewise (right north of Haskell's Hardware). The building finally wore out in the last decade and was salvaged for lumber. Newhall Signal, Thursday, June 7, 1962

Born in 1891, Arthur B. "Perk" Perkins came to Newhall in 1919 to manage the fledgling Newhall Water Company, the forefather of the Newhall County Water District. He became a civic leader, organized Newhall's first Fourth of July Parades, sold real estate and built many homes in the growing community. Upon retirement, Perkins made it his mission to assemble all the historical documents and photographs of the Santa Clarita Valley he could find. Perkins published a manuscript on the history of the Santa Clarita Valley in 1957. In 1962 he wrote a series of articles for the Signal newspaper, appropriately titled "Story of our Valley." He was consulted on local historical matters until his death in 1977. It is quite literally the case that without A.B. Perkins, much of the history of the Santa Clarita Valley would have scattered to the winds. Had it not been for AB Perkins, this website would be very sparse indeed. According to the Newhall County Water District(1999), this photograph probably shows Perkins at Well no. 5, located at Market and Arch streets. The well was abandoned by the water district in 1954 and dismantled. SCVHS AP0828

Beale's Cut Man next to Wagon "blt 183 E F Beale"
"Beale's Cut - This Project for Profit of Edward Fitzgerald Beale, backin 1863, should not be underestimated. For some years, it saved the Los Angeles area from Stagnation, holding open the shorted supply line. Its benefits were twofold. First: the merchants had an edge in competition in the mining areas of Kern County and the Owens Valley. Second: it was Remi Nadeau's mules who ate the barley grown in the Los Angeles Basin almost the only worthwhile cash crop the local farmers had. When the mules movedon, on occasion, to other terminals, there was sadness down by the Plaza. Apparently, explosives were not used to. 40 years ago, the marks of the crow bars and picks on the sheer walls were plainly visible. A very old picture" "Newhall Signal reprint, "Events That Shaped This Valley, for the Chamber of Commerce c December 1961"

P ABP-13-35-Print, Photographic Henry Mayo Newhall Born May 13, 1825 in the industrial town of Saugus, Massachusetts, Henry Mayo Newhall sought his fortune in the California Gold Rush of 1849. He failed as a miner but succeeded as an auctioneer in brawling San Francisco. A keen businessman and shrewd investor, Newhall parlayed his auctioneering fortune into an even greater fortune in railroads, ultimately becoming one of the founders of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company Betwen 1872 and 1875, Newhall purchased five of the old Mexican land grant ranchos throughout California, including the 48,000-acre Rancho San Francisco, covering the western half of the Santa Clarita Valley and eastern Ventura County. He sold a railroad right-of-way to Southern Pacific for a dollar and a plot of land for another dollar, and a town sprang up bearing his name/ Two miles to the north, a second town bore the name of his birthplace. The Rancho San Francisco was used for farming and ranching during Newhall's lifetime. Newhall experimented with a wide variety of crops, from corn and alfalfa to sugar cane and citrus fruits. The staple, however, was wheat, which was harvested with great success until the early 1880s, when the climate changed for the worse. Newhall split his time between San Francisco, where he tended to his business of his H.M. Newhall & Co. auction house, and the Rancho San Francisco, where he planned to focus his attention after 1880. In the summer of 1880, however, he fell ill with food poisoning and was never quite the same again. In March of 1882, he was thrown from his horse while riding on the Ranch. He was taken by train to San Francisco, where he died on March 13, at the age of 56. On June 1, 1883, H.M. Newhall's five sons incorporated the family-owned Newhall land and Farming	A. B. Company. Agriculture and cattle ranching, and vineyards in Central California, remained the company's focus well into the 20th century, even after oil was discovered on the Rancho San Francisco (by now called the Newhall Ranch) in December 1936. In the mid-1950s however, change came very rapidly as the company went public and its directors took note of America's great westward migration. The New town of Valencia - designed as a self-contained community where home, employment, schools, recreation, shopping and the outdoors interrelate - was born in 1965 and was still growing thirty years later. Citrus orchards and vineyards continue to produce revenue for the company, but housing is by far its biggest concern today as The Newhall Land and Farming Company develops new towns in California and Arizona.

P ABP-14-22-Print, Photographic Students walking across football field, Hart High c 1950 On January 13, 1945, the California State Board of Education approved petitions of five elementary school districts in the Santa Clarita Valley -- Newhall, Saugus, Castaic, Mint Canyon and Sulphur Springs -- to form the Santa Clarita Union High School District." Two weeks later, on January 29th, local voters approved a bond measure to build the valley's first high school on a 27- acre parcel in Newhall, 20 acres of which had been donated to the new school district. Local historian AB Perkins suggest the name "Santa Clarita" or "Little St Clare" for the new school -- a diminutive form of the name given to the valley and to its river by Father Juan Crespi in 1769. However, the school's opening in 1946 came just three months after the death of its chief benefactor, cowboy actor and Newhall resident - William S. Hart. And so, the school and the school district, bear Hart's name to this day (although the schoolboard occasionally flirts with the idea of changing the districts name back to "Santa Clarita"). The five original members of the Santa Clarita Union High School District governing board were elected on March 9, 1945. They were: Tom M. Frew, Jr. and S.S. Donaldson, representing the Newhall District; Mary Bonelli representing Saugus; Mildred Gilmour representing Castaic; and Charles Brown representing Mint Canyon and Sulphur Springs. All were current members of their respective elementary school boards with the exception of Frew, who had retired from the Newhall board after serving as its president for several years. In this photograph, taken about 1950, Hart High School gymnasium is under construction (right, background). The gym was destroyed in the 1994 Northridge earthquake and was rebuilt in 1996 with federal grant money and charitable contributions from members of the the community. SCVHS AP1422	A. B. 4th of July Parade 1955			also 8-31
This is downtown Newhall's entire 1955 Fourth of July Parade. The Newhall - Saugus Kiwanis ha organized the parade until 1938. when American Legion Post took it over. By 1955, however, the parade was in the hands of an association called the "Old West" which, according to historian A.B. Perkins, had "died on its feet". As seen in this photo, fourteen people (including photographer Richard Trueblood) insisted on keeping the tradition alive. Newhall had seen a Fourth of July Parade every year since 1932, wiht the exception of two war years. Left to Right: Clyde Houdeshell (head obscured by flag); A.B. "Perk" Perkins (tilted against wheelbarrow); young Johnny Trueblood (with little flag); Signal editor Fred Trueblood, Jr. (with flag and gun); Jim Buddell (with drum); Fred Trueblood, Sr. (with crutch); Johnny Houdeshell (playing fife); young Freddy Trueblood (coonskin cap and flag); Don Steward (Carrying sign reading "Don't Let the Tradition Die"); Charles Stanley (with bass drum); Buck Pryde (with large flag); Cecil Knaggs (with baton at rest). Carrying the confederate flag and obscured by the color bearer is Bobbie Trueblood (wife of Fred Jr.) who would go on to participate in fifty consecutive Independence Day parades in Newhall from 1946-1995. "For a few democratic years, probably President Cleveland's administration, Campton's store lost the postoffice when the postmaster's job went to George Larkey. Larkey was then living in the Hardison and Stewart headquarters (pictured) on Main St. (railroad ave at 8th), built in the early 1880's as an office warehouse with a loading platform backed up against the tracks. After hardison and Stewart pulled out for Santa Paula (and the founding of the Union Oil Co., it was a residence and postoffice. Later, a second story was added and it was known as the Ashbridge Hotel. when the highway moved over to San Fernando Rd, Mrs Frances Phillips purchased the building and did likewise (right north of Haskell's hardware). Sterling Train "Sterling"
Railroad buffs should enjoy this fine shot of the oil fueled, narrow gaug, steam engine passing under the trestle tracks which carried the waste to the dumps. Two daily round trips from mine to Lang were standard, but an emergency could cause three. Ben Truax

engineered the Flying Cloud most of the years it ran, but, Glen Wright and Clarence Gerberick also performed. There was a minor hazard, due to an S curve, down by the camp, which sometimes derailed the rolling stock, but at other times checked a runaway train in its wild flight. The pictured engine was no the first power unit. That was a smaller "dinkey" capable of handling only three flat cars. This baby handled five w/out trouble. The tank car was normally right behind the engine. The Cylindrical tank inthe foreground carried fuel. ON the flats is the regular load of Colemanite, starting to the refineries at Pittsburgh of Chicago. At the end of the camps life, the shipments were going to a newly built refinery at Wilmington. During WW1, shipments were made to Bordeaux. The return trip, from Lang, on the Soledad Creek, the train carried water, and timber, of which the latter consumed enormous amounts. "Newhall Signal, The Story of the Sterling Borax Company, Thursday, October 12, 1961"

one estimate of the "run of the mine" ore was about 10% Colemanite. With freightage what it always is - too darned much- a reduction plant was a necessity. In this pictured plant, about 40% of gross tonage could be diverted directly tothe dumps. Three Tanks on the hillside(obscured by Plant tower) held fuel oil, pumped from trackage, close to the beginning of the switch back. Ore went into a bin equipped with screw feed, thence routed through sorting, grizzly, and screen. (the sheep seperated from the goats, as it were, the goats going to Dump, the sheep to the Roasters). Around twelve to thirteen hundred sacks, 60% Colemanite reached the loading platform daily. The loaded flats are here shown in front of platform. Thence the material went down the narrow gauge to the storage warehouse six mile away, at Lang, on the main line shipment to the Refinery. "Newhall Signal, The Story of the Sterling Borax Company, Thursday, October 5, 1961"

ABP at Jenkins Flume related to 18-28, maybe 13-12 "Up back of the Warm Springs Camp, is to be found this miniature of, say, Beale's Cut, carved through the rock. It is believed that this cut is a relic of Bill Jenkins mining projects for the fluming of water down Elizabeth Canyon to the placers he was then working in the late 1870's. The flume base is visible for a couple of miles on the hills south of the road going up to the camp. The width of this cut is adequate for a flume, but for no other purpose. At one time, Jenkins planned on getting water over from Elizabeth Lake, or the San Francisquito Canyon, via Ruby Canyon. That dream did not materialize. Incidenatally, Ruby Canyon was named for Bill's oldest daughter, Ruby (Mrs. Charles Kellogg). photo by Richard Trueblood -Newhall Signal, The Castaic Story, Thursday June 7, 1962

Saugus School
Remember the Old Saugus School? The writer does. He acquired a liberal education, back about 1930, when he salvaged the old building. In the wrecking process, he learned that earlier generations sometimes depended on weight rather than nails to anchor walls. Dr. Claude Peters, who sewed the writer's ear back on, hemstitched various rips in various places, thought it most fortunate that most of the cuts bruises and abrasions were above the shoulders. In his opinion, it was by far the best location to withstand such an assault. In this picture, the right hand unit was built in 1908. About 1920, it was lifted, turned slightly, and its siamese twin firmly attached. This it remained until the Big Depression and Bryan Cone wrangled a grant that started today's school plant. There is an unconfirmed issue of the early thirties that got modernization underway, was passed by the slightly illicit method of getting some known antagonists so (drunk) that they couldnt reach the polls to record their No votes. This rumor is probably pure scandal having no basis in fact

The darndest single spectacle of an old oil field was the jackplant. the more one watched it in operation, the more one wondered whoever had the nerve to suggest such an anomaly in the first place, and the patience to assemble it. There's quite a lot of pumping for productions in oil fields. Today, nice little electronically operated, or gas operated engines are installed on an individual well and then forgotted until a sanding job, or the natural cussedness of mechanical objects brings it to mind. Back in 1880, power was steam. So you tucked a fire box boiler back in the brush and set up your jackplant. At best, it was a weird design to go in all directions at once. At worst, it was a horrid nightmare. You had a coupld of eccentric plates, with about 18 holes, or eyelets in their rims, in which the cable hooks set. As they proceeded agitatedly through their pre-conceived, conflicting orbits, their cables, tightening and loosening, powered the well pumps. This CSO jackplant pumped about 15 wells on the CSO hill. The closeup view shows Merle Cook sitting on top of the jackling hook-ups. Below is the geared wheel, and bull wheel transmitting power from the 35 HP steam engine. Abandoned well CSO No. 6 is just beyond the plant. - Newhall Signal, The Pico Ghost Camp, Thursday, January 25, 1962

A very old view of the CSO hill, showing cabins tucked in around the derricks, It so happens that today you only locate these sites by the ledges in place. The shacks are gone. The derricks have largely succumbed to time and weathering. Nothing remains of the bridge. The creek bed, under it, went on a rampage and changed positions decades back. The derrick in the middle of the picture porbably was on the Star well. At the century's turn, this was a most active section. The picture was possibly taken in the last half of the 1880's. Mr Goldberg(Howard) thinks the lower derrick may have been Well #32. The location was then marked by the bridge by the bluff. The bridge went many years ago and the bluff was cut out for today's road. Anyhow, the scene was there- once. (it hasn't quite collapsed as of last week). The larger structure was the machining shop. Over the horses shows the blacksmith shop. The picture's date could be in the late 1890's. If you can mentally thread your way in safety through the involved traffic jam, on beyond the blacksmith shop you would have found the road up the PCO hill, to the left. The CSO hill is to your right. And, at a later date, near the front of the PCO road, was the gasoline plant. The sheet iron structure, showing against the end of the machine shop, was probably one of the earlier blacksmith shops. Schorr, wartime owner of the Acton hotel, returned from military service in 1945 to find that many of the furnishings and supplies he had left behind at his hotel and store were missing. He accused the man he had hired to run the business in his absence, Clarence Rush, of theft. Rush, the town postmaster, was arrested; he was arraigned on Thursday, Oct. 18 1945, and released on $2,000 bond. The next night at 9:20 firefighters were alerted that the Acton hotel was on fire. By the time they arrived on scene it was too late. Rush's preliminary hearing on the grand-theft charge was scheduled for Dec. 7, 1945. Acton Hotel Rudolph Eugene Nickel was 31 years old when he pulled into the tine Acton train station for the first time on Oct. 11, 1887. He became the town's second resident - second only to an entrepreneur named John F. Duehren, who had built the '49er saloon in 1870 to serve the miners and prospectors of the nearby canyons in the northeastern Santa Clarita Valley. Soon known as the "father of Acton" Nickel was instumental in establishing most of the amenities a small frontier town would need. Employed as an agent for the Acton station, he build a general store with his family residence above, and became the frist Acton postmaster when he moved the Soledad Post Office into his store on Jan 24, 1888. On July 15, 1891, Nickel published the first newspaper in the Santa Clarita Valley, The Acton Rooster, which came out on the 15th of each month for 22 years. on Nov 2, 1891, he established the valley's first water company, Acton Water Works. In march ot 1900, Nickel was appointed warden of San Francisco Harbor by his friend, California Governor, Henry T. Gage, who had interests in a number of famous gold mines near Acton. Nickel subsequently moved out of the are and died in 1922. In 1890, Nicel competed his Acton Hotel, a lavish, two-story Victorian structure with a loft. Governor Gage entertained several political allies at the hotel, most notably Presidents Theodore Roosevelt and Herbert C. Hoover, as well as the King of Spain and attorney Earl Rogers. The hotel mysteriously burned to the ground on Friday night, Oct. 19, 1945. SCVHS AP2218	P ABP-22-19-Print, Photographic	A. B. Perkins Collection			Perkins Worden Collection

This was the Castaic train station. All of it. The Southern Pacific Railroad Company erected the siding at Castaic Junction (near today's State Route 26) in 1887. In this 1909 photograph, May McDonald and Ethel Casey are waiting patiently beside the tracks. The little siding was wiped out in the St. Francis Dam disaster of March 12-13, 1928. The town of Castaic at the northwestern edge of the Santa Clarita Valley derives its name from the Tataviam Indian word "kashtuk." In the mid to late 1800s, Castaic consisted of a number of large ranches, as did neighboring regions throughout the greater Saugus area. Castaic's first white settlers were probably the Cordova family, who arrived in 1835, followed in 1853 by a '49er named George Washington Lechler, who homesteaded in nearby Hasley Canyon and became one of the area's most prominent citizens. The train station in this photograph preceded the establishment of the Castaic School District two years later. A post office was erected at Castaic Junction in 1894, but it lasted less than a year. It was not until 1915, when the Ridge Route opened, that Castaic really made its way onto the map.

Beale's Cut - Man next to wagon also 10-2, 23-7 Beale's Cut - This project for profit of Edward Fitzgerald Beale, back in 1863, should not be underestimated. For some years, it saved the Los Angeles area from stagnation, holding open the shorted supply line. Its benefits were twofold. First: the merchants had an edge in competition in the mining areas of Kern County and the Owens Valley. Second: it was Remi Nadeau's mules who ate the barley grown in the Los Angeles Basin almost the only worthwhile cashcrop the local farmers had. When the Nadeau sometimes fed as many as 800 mules. The Cut is about 92 feet deep. Apparently, explosives were not used to. 40 years ago, the marks of the crow bars and picks on the sheers walls were plainly visible. For some years, it saved the Los Angeles area from stagnation, holding open the shorted supply line. Its benefits were twofold. First: the merchants had an edge in competition in the mingin areas of Kern County and the Owens Valley. Second: it was Remi Nadeau's mules who ate the barley grown in the Los Angeles Basin almost the only worthwhile cashcrop the local farmers had. When the Nadeau soemtimes fed as many as 800 mules. The Cut is about 92 feet deep. Apparantly, explosives were not used to. 40 years ago, the marks of the	A. B. Perkins Collection			Perkins Worden Collection

This map from the February, 1957 edition of Desert Magazine shows the gemstone quarries above the tiny mining town of Ravenna, which once sat four miles southwest of Acton in Soledad Canyon. A number of miners, most notably Colonel Thomas Finley Mitchell, arrived in Soledad Canyon in 1860 and set up various mining camps near the canyon's rich veins of gold, silver and copper, which came into great demand when the civil war broke out only a year later. Local historian Jerry Reynolds writes: A conglomeration of log cabins and tents moved up and down the canyon with each new strike. Called "Soledad City" wherever it was plunked down, it provided such basic needs as faro tables, rye whiskey and ladies of the evening. A portable grocery was operated by James O'Reilly, a flaming - haired Irishman of medium build, pug nose, and happy-go-lucky air about him. It wasn't long before a post office was needed, and as one might expect, the U.S. Postal Service rejected the name "Soledad City" out of fear that it would be confused with the city of Soledad in Monterrey County. O'Reilly suggested the name Ravenna in honor of the local merchant and saloon keeper, Manuel Ravenna. The name became official on June 12, 1868. Ravenna became a shipping point from which the canyon's gold, silver and copper ores were hauled off to San Pedro. The area was also rich in a variety of gemstones, particularly moss agate and green waxy quartz, as evidenced by the map of several old gemstone mines. Strip mining is still a big industry in the Soledad and in parts of the neighboring Mojave Desert, but the little mining camp that was named for it's long-forgotten barkeep is nothing more than a faded memory. Information from the February, 1957 Desert Magazine and from "Santa Clarita: Valley of the Golden Dream" by Jerry Reynolds SCVHS AP2904

St. John's Subdivision was planned as a dry colony by prohibitionists Henry Clay Needham of Newhall and his pal, Gov. John St. John of Kansas, in the 1880s-1890s. It didn't quite work out, as the saloons outnumbered the churches in Newhall. However, the subdivision of land went through, and references to "St. John" can sometimes be found in deeds of trust for area properties today. SCVHS AP3011 front of Acton's original schoolhouse, known as the "Little White School." The photograph was taken August 25, 1889 by Rudolph Eugene Nickel, the "father of Acton." The home of George Rebbeck and family is seen in the background at left.

The Little White School was built in 1881 and was used until the brick "Soledad school" was erected in 1890 at roughly the same site off of Soledad Canyon Road in Acton (northeastern Santa Clarita Valley).
The following is paraphrased from a caption to this photograph which was probably written in the 1920s: Acton's first church services and Sunday school classes were held in the first old Acton schoolhouse (shown), where the brick building was erected in 1890, with Mattie Adams as teacher.

Acton Hotel 1931 Rudolph Eugene Nickel was 31 years old when he pulled into the tine Acton train station for the first time on Oct. 11, 1887. He became the town's second resident - second only to an enterpreneur named John F. Duehren, who had built the '49er saloon in 1870 to serve the miners and prospectors of the nearby canyons in the northeastern Santa Clarita Valley. Soon known as the "father of Acton" Nickel was instumental in establishing most of the amenities a small frontier town would need. Employed as an agent for the Acton station, he build a general store with his family residence above, and became the frist Acton postmaster when he moved the Soledad Post Office into his store on Jan 24, 1888. On July 15, 1891, Nickel published the first newspaper in the Santa Clarita Valley, The Acton Rooster, which came out on the 15th of each month for 22 years. on Nov 2, 1891, he established the valley's first water company, Acton Water Works. In march ot 1900, Nickel was appointed warden of San Francisco Harbor by his friend, California Governor, Henry T. Gage, who had interests in a number of famous gold mines near Acton. Nickel subsequently moved out ot the are and died in 1922. In 1890, Nicel competed his Acton Hotel, a lavish, two-story Victorian structure with a loft. Governor Gage entertained several political allies at the hotel, most notably Presidents Theodore Roosevelt and Herbert C. Hoover, as well as the King of Spain and attorney Earl Rogers. The hotel mysteriously burned to the ground on Friday night, Oct. 19, 1945. SCVHS AP3132

Gov Gage, Blum around 1890 - 1912 mine buildings obscured by trees

Perkins Worden Collection

Identification of Blum seems to be incorrect given the following:

California Governor Henry T. Gage (1899-1903), center, and Ed Brough, right overlook the Red Rover Mine in Acton sometime between 1890 and 1912. Gage owned the Red Rover and most of the other profitable mines in the Acton area. Brough was employed as the Red Rover's Superintendent.

Paris Brough, Ed's son and an employee of the mine, wrote this original caption:

A photo of Governor Henry T. Gage on left, and Dad, Ed Brough, on the right. 1890 - 1912. Roofed headframe & steam hoist house. Office, boarding house and home behind trees. Blacksmith shop on mid center. The steam powered stamp mill is out of sight below the trees at right. Dad was superintendent at the time of photo but I do not know the year it was taken. He was in charge for a number of years. The view is from the saddle south of the shaft looking north to head of Red Rover valley and the old Erickson Ranch. The buildings in background are the horse barn, miners cabins, and the Shilling home is behind the trees at right. Shilling was mine foreman under dad. You will recall the Shilling family. One of the other of these adults later became a doctor of some kind and lived in Highland Park. They lost a son while at Acton, I believe his name was Harold.

Leave Form for American soldier William L. Houghton stationed in France shortly after World War One. William Houghton was a relative of the early Santa Clarita family Houghton, and possible resident himself. This form shows him assigned to the 364th Infantry in the 91st Division. He was approved to visit the Haute Pyrenees Area on February 22nd, 1919 for seven days. At this time nothing else is known about William L. Houghton's military service or his relation to the Santa Clarita Valley.

Group has several common articles of clothing (hats, medals) but at this time are not distinguishable as belonging to a particular group, organization, or time period. The text on the hats is mostly unreadable. It has a cross with a word above it that appears to be a uncommon proper noun and is perhaps the groups name or affiliation. On either side of the cross are two letters or numbers. While the letters/numbers on the left side of the cross are difficult to read it appears to be a letter (possible N, M or H) and then a number (most likely 7). The two numbers on the right side of the cross are easily read as "76".

Pacific Telephone photo of effort to restore phone service after the St. Francis Dam Disaster. Same person in a suit, shirt, tie, and hat, and the same scenery as in Picture HS-2039. However, the person appears to be walking away from the telephone poles. In fact, the person's image is now blurred, as happens when a camera shutter is not fast enough to capture motion.
P HS2041-Print, Photographic
Pacific Telephone photo of effort to restore phone service after the St. Francis Dam Disaster. 2 persons, both in suits, shirts, ties, and hats, posing to the right of the picture. The persons are close to one end of what appears to be a large, downed telephone pole with wires running to and from it. The wires are propped up off the ground with some dead trees/branches cut up for that purpose. Debris surround the telephone pole and the 2 persons. In the foreground to the right of the picture is what appears to be the stump of another telephone pole. In the distance towards the middle of the picture is another telephone pole, still standing, but no crossmembers. In the background is a large mountain range.

Pacific Telephone photo of effort to restore phone service after the St. Francis Dam Disaster. 3 telephone poles still standing. The one to the left of the picture still has crossmembers, relay connectors, and wires attached to it. The pole in the middle of the picture is but a stump. The pole to the right of the picture only has the bottom half showing, so the condition of its crossmembers, etc. is unknown. Dead vegetation and other rubble surround the 3 poles. The pole to the right of the picture has dead branches hanging off it, and a relay connector hanging off the branch. In the distance, to the left of the picture is an open-railed flatbed truck with people standing on top of the flatbed. Further in the distance behind the flatbed stand 2 seemingly leafless trees.

Pacific Telephone photo of effort to restore phone service after the St. Francis Dam Disaster. A mountain towers over 2 telephone poles. The distant telephone pole, close to the mountain, stands straight with its crossmembers intact, wires running to and from them. The telephone pole in the middle is apparently broken, its upper 2/3 leaning to the left from an upright lower 1/3. To the right of the picture, close to the photographer, is what appears to be part of a damaged building, a shack perhaps, with parts of it strewn on the ground. There is desert vegetation on the mountain, around the telephone poles, and in the foreground.

Part of where the chickens are foraging is what appears to be a discarded piece of equipment to the left of the picture, and a mound of earth to the right of the picture. At the back of the fenced-off yard are plenty of desert bushes and several large trees. A building is barely visible behind the large tree to the left. In the distance to the right behind a telephone pole is what appears to be another building, larger than the one to the left. Much farther in the distance, are some large mountain ranges.

The California Star Oil Works held drilling leases in Pico Canyon until they sold out to Standard Oil (Chevron) in 1903.
The superintendant was Charles Alexander "Alex" Mentry, who was so successful in his operations that the community in the canyon was called Mentryville.
The very first commercially successful oil well west of Pennsylvania was spring poled in Pico Canyon by W.W. Jenkins, Sanford Lyon and Henry C. Wiley in 1869. Petroleum was hauled out in leather sacks slung over the backs of mules.
Several people, starting out in the Pico fields, rose to prominence, including George C. Pardee, Governor of California and Eugene W. Biscailuz, Sheriff of Los Angeles County.
C.S.O held annual picnics in the Powell Grove, just outside of Newhall. In the 1880s, "outside of town" was at Market and Newhall Ave., just behind the First Presbyterian Church of todayl

St. Francis Dam on it's last day of existence prior to the dam break. J. David Rogers states: "The reservoir was brought up to within 4 inches of spillway crest for the first time on Wed., March 7, 1928. All of the City's reservoirs were full by the following Sunday, March 11th. Damkeeper Tony Harnischfeger called Mulholland on the morning of the 12th to report spillage of "dirty water" from the right abutment area. That morning about 2 cfs spillage was coming over the spillway panels from wind-whipped waves, shown [in this photo] around noon on March 12th."

Aftermath of St. Francis Dam disaster. Photo shows remains of dam. Block 1 was the only piece which remained standing. Blocks 5 and 7 seen at the base of block 1 were thought to be the first pieces of the dam to collapse (along with block 6) when the ancient landslide on the east abutment gave way. They were not washed further down stream like many of the other blocks because they collapsed before the main torrent of water had a chance to escape. Blocks 3 and 4 (along with block 2) were adjacent and just to the right of block 1. They were probably the last blocks to collapse after most of the water had already escaped and therefore also were not washed downstream. Block labeled 4 in this photo is actually block 2 according to J. David Rogers. Dr. Rogers states: "Photograph taken after the failure showing the disposition of Blocks 1 thru 7. The left half of the main dam structure fell into an enormous hole cut beneath its left side, from Elevation 1660 down to 1615, a depth of 45 feet! Note position of Block 5, well below chatter line on downstream face. This occurred when the right abutment failed.

Man holding North Oaks brochure presumably pointing at North Oaks area. Helm and Earle Schmidt opened an airport in 1946 on the 1,800-acre 6-S Ranch, which had previously been owned by pioneer Los Angeles freighter Remi Nadeau. The airfield sat to the northwest of the modern-day intersection of Soledad Canyon and Whites Canyon Roads. Following Helm Schmidt's death in 1960, the acreage was sold and developed into the North Oaks tract, which began construction in 1961. It was the Santa Clarita Valley's second housing tract -- the first being the 15-home "Rancho Santa Clarita" subdivision that the William Bonelli family built in Seco (Dry) Canyon in 1947.

The Swall Block. Market & Spruce Streets. Standing left to right: August Ferrier, Ed Abbott, Philip Rivera, Robert Bell, Albert Swall. This two story brick block was built in 1914, and locally was a 7 day wonder having electric lights, bricks, and two stories. Robert Ball was a druggist and proprietor of the Newhall Pharmacy. Next tenancy was the Meat Market and Grocery. Abbott was proprietor. Rivera cut meat there. Then the lobby of Swall's Hotel, and beyond that the post office, Albert C. Swall, postmaster. Destroyed in 1971 earthquake.

Goldie Colwell : Born January 29, 1889 - Kansas From All Movie Guide: A pioneering Western star, Kansas-born Goldie Colwell was Tom Mix's leading lady in at least 25 Selig Westerns in the early 1910s. Colwell also appeared opposite early matinee idol Harold Lockwood in a couple of melodramas and was featured in The Adventures of Kathlyn (1913), the first serial with holdover suspense. The Mix Westerns followed the serial, but she was eventually replaced by the cowboy's future wife, Victoria Forde, and, no longer in the first bloom of youth, retired in 1919. ~ Hans J. Wollstein, All Movie Guide

This is to acknowledge with appreciation the wonderful service rendered by you in assisting bringing out bodies and the use of your machine during the St. Francis Dam disaster. Without your cooperation and valued help this office would have been unable to clean up this sad situation as readily as was done.
Such assistance as yours makes those of us engaged in our line of endeavor feel that it is worth while and you have my sincere thanks.

Needham Ranch near the head of Newhall Creek, H. Clay Needham started assembling his "Home Ranch" back in 1889. He built it up to a 750 acre spread. His estate sold the property and it is today the Eternal Valley Memorial Park. Mr. Needham came to Newhall in 1889 as Manager of the St. John Sub-division, approximately 10,000 acres south of Saugus on the Rancho San Francisco. About 1908 he joined with M. W. Atwood on a re-subdivision of some of this land, in which he was successful. He was the local representative of the Newhall Land and Farming Company until his death in ??? and was very active in the State Proibitionist Party, having been its candidate for both U.S. Senator and President. hs7972a is an image of the back of the photo not loading

St. John Subdivision announcement, photo of paper. The first major real estate purchase on the Newhall Ranch was by a Prohibition Party group in 1888. The group bought acreage on the west side of anything-but-dry Newhall and envisioned a "dry" colony. The colony, remote from anything but the many saloons along Newhall's main street, never got off the groun. The land reverted to the Newhalls

The music was written by Fred E. Ahlert, the lyrics by Roy Turk. The song was published in 1931. It had three periods of great popularity: in 1931, right after its publication; in 1946; and in 1961 into 1962. The song has been recorded by many artists (ranging from country-blues legends like Moon Mullican and Jerry Lee Lewis, to swing legends Frank Sinatra and Dean Martin) and is now a standard.

"O mio babbino caro" ("Oh My Beloved Father") is a soprano aria from the opera Gianni Schicchi (1918), by Giacomo Puccini, to a libretto by Giovacchino Forzano. It is sung by Laretta after tensions between her father Schicchi and the family of Rinuccio, the boy she loves, have reached a breaking point that threatens to separate her from Rinuccio. It provides a contrasting interlude expressing lyrical simplicity and single-hearted love in the atmosphere of hypocrisy, jealousy, double-dealing and feuding in medieval Florence of Puccini's only comedy, and it provides the only set-piece in the through-composed opera. (Translation of song): Act I. Oh my beloved father, I love him, I love him! I'll go to Porta Rossa, To buy our wedding ring. Oh yes, I really love him. And if you still say no, I'll go to Ponte Vecchio, And throw myself below. My love for which I suffer, At last, I want to die. Father I pray, I pray. Father I pray, I pray. "Quando me'n vo", also known as "Musetta's Waltz", is a soprano aria in 3/4 time (a waltz) from act 2 of Puccini's opera La bohème. It is sung by the character Musetta, in the presence of her bohemian friends, and is directed toward Marcello in order to make him jealous. (Translation of song): Act II. When I walk alone in the street People stop and stare at me And everyone looks at my beauty, Looks at me, From head to foot... And then I relish the sly yearning which escapes from their eyes and which is able to perceive my most hidden beauties. Thus the scent of desire is all around me, and it makes me happy, makes me happy! And you who know, who remember and yearn you shrink from me?

"C Jam Blues" was formally recorded under that title in January, 1942, for RCA Victor Records. It continued to be a staple of the Ellington repertoire, generally featuring a handful of the soloists in the band.
"C Jam Blues" is a jazz standard composed in 1942 by Duke Ellington and performed by countless other musicians, such as Dave Grusin and Django Reinhardt. As the title suggests, the piece follows a twelve-bar blues form in the key of C major.
The piece typically features several improvised solos. The final solo continues in the upper register as the entire ensemble comes in and the music grows to a climax. The melody likely originated from the clarinetist Barney Bigard in 1941, but its origin is not perfectly clear.
